Notes

1. The thorn at the end of this French word shows interesting interference from English in the morphology of the verb. [TGH]
2. This gloss has been executed later in the line, beginning over un [koigner]. [ETFM]
3. This word could be read as either comums or comunis; in the latter case, we may be dealing with a Latinate form. [TGH]
4. This gloss has been executed earlier in the line, beginning over the verb. [ETFM]
